Don Celso – From the eastern part of Jalisco, aged for 8-9 months in new and previously used oak barrels, this Tequila has an exceptional balance of wood flavor, hints of vanilla, spices and aromas of mature Agave.

El Caudillo – From the western region of Jalisco, aged for 8-9 months in oak barrels previously used to age bourbon, this Tequila has an oaky flavor and flowery finish exclusive to the region.

El Destilador – From the northwest area of Jalisco, aged for 6-7 months in white oak casks, this Tequila finishes with a clean clear aroma of Agave and wood.

El Llano – From the western section of Jalisco, aged for 4-6 months in barrels formerly used to rest bourbon, this Tequila has complex flavors of baked Agave, citrus with floral overtones and subtle undertones of fruit, rye, artichoke, chamomile, caramel and oak.

Penacho Azteca – From the Southwest corner of Jalisco, aged 4-6 months in American oak barrels formerly used for aging Cognac and Bourbon, this Tequila has flavors of chocolate, vanilla and caramel with a long dry finish.
